A name with a job to do.

Cabin suggests the journey and Carry the useful kit. Together they are understandable without limiting the brand to one bag type.

DM Sans

Space Mono

Mono: units, source dates, numbered labels and metadata.

Useful words. Clear boundaries.

01 Say what the reader can check: “Measure the packed exterior.”

02 Use warm, precise sentences. Keep airline and product names exact.

03 Distinguish a packing suggestion from a rule.

04 Avoid “airline approved,” universal best claims and invented travel stories.

Evidence is part of the voice.

AI-generated scenes are editorial illustrations, not evidence of a named product test. Product specifications need a traceable source. Use real contributor profiles only when their role and work can be verified.

A source reference is not a test award. An illustrative photograph is not proof of ownership. A calculated result is not a guarantee of real-world acceptance or compatibility.

Make the next step clear.

The opening folio, measured diagrams and rounded actions belong to a travel journal. Use restrained rules and generous margins.

01 One clear H1 and a short explanatory introduction.

02 Persistent labels, visible keyboard focus and explicit units on every calculator.

03 Results explain the method, invalid states and practical limits.

04 Articles link to their parent hub, a related guide and an appropriate tool.

05 Use reduced-motion preferences and never hide information behind motion.

Working dimensions

Content maximum: 1,320 px. Article measure: 790 px. Minimum control height: 44 px. Spacing rhythm: 4, 8, 12, 16, 24, 32, 48, 64 and 96 px. Motion: restrained transitions with reduced-motion support.

Design tokens are exported as JSON. The site includes live examples of primary actions, links, labels, input states, results and editorial navigation.

Atmosphere with honesty.

Soft daylight, deep green luggage, woven fabric and a quiet European journey. Natural texture should carry the atmosphere.

Production rules

01 Commission original scenes with a consistent palette and credible light.

02 Use captions to identify AI-generated editorial photographs.

03 Do not imply a generic object is the named product in a review.

04 Keep instructions, measured diagrams and photographs accessible with useful labels and alt text.

Launch handoff

The preview includes its own source, assets, brand files and content hierarchy. The domain is registered. Public launch still requires a working contact mailbox, final publisher details and approved tracking/account configuration. Keep each publication independently transferable.

An answer. Then a useful next step.

The article system

01 Open with the direct answer and decision criteria.

02 Build the explanation with a comparison, a worked example and a checklist readers can save.

03 Use two distinct visuals per guide; caption generated scenes clearly.

04 Link the original sources, responsible editorial desk and relevant tool.

A connected publication

Topic hubs connect focused guides. Collections bring reading, product suitability checks and tools into one practical route. Searchable journals and product shelves support exploration without fabricated scores or prices.
